DULCE PRO PATRIA MORI.

[PERCIVAL.]

Oh! it is great for our country to die, when ranks are contending;
Bright is the wreath of our fame; glory awaits us for aye—
Glory that never is dim, shining on with light never ending—
Glory that never shall fade, never, O never away!

Oh! it is sweet for our country to die! How softly reposes
Warrior youth on his bier, wet by the tears of his love,
Wet by a mother's warm tears; they crown him with garlands of roses,
Weep, and then joyously turn, bright where he triumphs above.

Not to the shades shall the youth descend who for country hath perished;
Hebe awaits him in heaven, welcomes him there with her smile;
There, at the banquet divine, the patriot spirit is cherished;
Gods love the young who ascend pure from the funeral pile.

Not to Elysian fields, by the still, oblivious river;
Not to the isles of the blest, over the blue, rolling sea;
But on Olympian heights shall dwell the devoted forever;
There shall assemble the good, there the wise, valiant, and free.

Oh! then how great for our country to die—in the front rank to perish,
Firm with our breast to the foe, victory's shout in our ear
Long they our statues shall crown, in songs our memory cherish;

Another Printer Gone to "Quod."

"Needing a little extra help last week, we were rather glad than otherwise to see a dirty, seedy-looking individual enter the door of our sanctum and announce himself as the inevitable tramp-printer. He was out of work, out of money, out of sorts, and out at the elbows, and we accordingly gave him a case and he helped us through the week, leaving us on Friday night with money in his pocket, and evidence that he had a brick in his hat. He said he was northward bound, and would leave on the first train. He failed to do so, however, and on Monday, being 'hard pressed' no doubt, he concluded that a pair of pantaloons hanging in front of Bidinger's would be a 'fat take', and he accordingly 'lifted' them from the 'hook'. Proceeding up the street to an alley, he was about to let the new clothes act as a 'sub' for the old ones, when Mr. Bidinger, who had followed him, took possession of him with assurance that he had a permanent, 'sit' for him. After taking the pantaloons, he watched him until the arrival of officer Hinckley, who, after a little 'chase,' succeeded in 'locking up his form' in the county jail. He is evidently a hard 'case,' and it is well that he is now in the 'embrace' of the 'minions' of the law, and behind the 'imposing stones' of the jail wall. It is just those 'sticks' of whom he is a 'type,' that cast discredit upon the trade."

"AT the depot on Monday evening, an eager-looking man jumped from the train and clasped a waiting woman to his arms. "Heavens, my wife!" said he. "Mercy! my ruffles," said she. Which showed what both were thinking of.

SCIENTISTS are claiming that instead of being cold, the moon is in reality red-hot; so much so that no living thing known to our world could exist there. This spoils the "green cheese" theory.

"THE indipendent press can afford to tell the truth," says an enthusiastic editor." "Yes; and tell it at all times," responds his malicious rival.

IRISH NEWS.

Antrim.

In the Criminal Court at the late Belfast Assizes, W. D. Atkinson was convicted of forgery; but, his mental capacity being much impaired, he was simply fined $500.

Armagh.

The Orangemen turned out in force in Portadown on the night of the 28th ult., and made an attack on the Catholic residents of the town, who defended themselves bravely. Shots were exchanged, and many persons were seriously wounded, including sub-Inspector Ware, and some members of the "Royal Irish," who made an ineffectual attempt to quell the disturbance.

Clare.

The ever-vigilant constabulary discovered a large quantity of coarse and fine powder stored under the extensive corn mills of Mr. Michael Flynn, Kilruch, on the 2d inst. No arrests have been made.

A dressmaker named Margaret Coleman, of Newmarket-on-Tergus, died suddenly on the 25th ult.; death resulted from disease of the heart.

The death of Mr. James Slater, Clerk of Gort Union is announced.

Cork.

At the Cork Land Sessions on Saturday, a claim was made by Daniel Mahony, who has been evicted by Capt. Sarsfield from a farm of thirteen acres at Kilmoney, near Carrigaline, for refusing to pay an advanced rent. The claimant had been paying £16 a year for the farm, at which several witnesses pronounced it dear, and willing to give £18, but Capt. Sarsfield demanded £23. After hearing several witnesses for the defense, the chairman came to the conclusion that the farm was not worth more than £18 a year, and allowed the claimant four years' rent for disturbance, which, after deducting the amount due for arrears, left the claimant £24.

Timothy Nagle was convicted of manslaughter at the late Cork Assizes. He was suspected of having killed an engine driver named Ames Wall, on the Great Southern and Western Railroad.

The Queen's College, Lee, Blackrock and Glenbrook crews contested in a gig race for a $125 cup on the 24th inst. The College crew won by about three boats lengths.

Nine prisoners, including Sergeant Desmond, were indicted for having stolen eight rifles from the barracks of the Bandon Militia. The jury disagreed, and the prisoners were discharged.

Fermanagh.

The death of Coroner Gamble of Enniskillen is announced.

Galway.

The County Galway (says the Irish Times) does seem to be unfairly delt with by the annexation to it of the islands of Inishboffin and Inishark. These islands, until recently, were attached to the County Mayo. Since the year 1859, the sum of £727 was levied off these islands for Grand Jury Cess, but only £50 was expended on the islands. The roads are almost obliterated, certainly they will not assist pedestrians or vehicles. They are about to be put in order, but the County Galway will be called on to contribute to defray the cost, although the County Mayo seems to have collected the money from the islands. Lord Hartington proposes to re-transfer the two islands back to Mayo "for fiscal purposes," which seems to be a curious and roundabout way of doing a very simple thing. Why not call upon the County Mayo to pay back money which they received for a special purpose.

Kerry.

The Lostowell meeting, in aid of the laborers' movement, was followed up on the following Sunday by an equally large one at Tralee. The resolutions passed at both declared that the homes of the agricultural laborers in Kerry are unfit for human habitation, and that laborer's are entitled to the franchise.

At the Tralee Assizes, a petty sessions clerk named Haggard was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment for forging the name of a prosecutor in his court to a receipt.

The lands of Moyloughbery, sold in the Landed Estates' Court, some weeks since, were purchased by Mr. Patrick Mitchell for himself, for the sum of £3,000.

Limerick.

Things are quiet in Limerick. Sub-Inspector Cruise has succeeded in capturing a dangerous rebel, armed with a box of percussion caps. We expect that the authorities, with their usual caution, keep this blood-thirsty desperado heavily ironed. Mrs. Bessie McCarthy has been convicted of her two hundred and first offence—getting drunk.

Mayo.

Thomas Higgins of Ballygherry was apprehended on on the 24th ult. on the Guion steamer Wyoming in Queenstown Harbor, on a charge of having embezzled large sums of money belonging to his employers.

At the County Mayo assizes Thomas Roche was sentenced to five years' penal servitude for having maliciously tampered with railway points at Claremorris station.

Edward Walsh, the wife murderer, was hanged within the precincts of the Castlebar gaol on the 19th inst.

Dublin.

A site spot between Ringsend and the Pigeon House Fort has been chosen as the site of a hospital for the reception of cholera patients coming from sea.

Monsell has refused an increase of salaries to the letter carriers.

The strike of the boatmen of the Grand canal has ended, to the satisfaction of the Company.

Meath.

At the last Trim Petty Sessions, before George W. Cuppage, Esq., J. P., and Richard Odlum, Esq., J. P., John McKenna and Luke Tully were brought before the magistrates for being found out of their houses at half-past ten o'clock on the night of 1st instant, and not being able to give a satisfactory account to the police. They were obliged to enter into fresh bail to appear on the next petty sessions day at Trim.

Sligo.

A marriage is arranged to take place the present month between Ellen Isabella, daughter of Mr. Kevill Davies, of Croft Castle, and Wellington, Herefordshire, and Mr. Denis Maurice O'Conor, of Clonalis, County Roscommon, M. P. for Sligo, and brother to the O'Conor Con, M. P.

Tipperary.

Two Crows father and son whose house is situated near the spot where Patt Mitchell, steward to Mr. Gibbons of Kilfrush, was shot dead on the 7th June, have been arrested, also seven of their employees including a woman named Kate Beane and a lad named Lonergan. There is however no evidence that they are the guilty parties.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, son of Captain Roberts of the Silver mine works, was seriously injured by the explosion of a boiler, with which he was experimenting in the latter part of last month. The doctors report favorably of his case.

In the Nenagh Union there are at present 488 persons receiving out-door relief at a cost per week of £20 10s. 6d. Of this number Nenagh contains 146. In the workhouse they have 364 paupers at an average cost of 3s. 3¼d. each.

Wicklow.

At the Wicklow Assizes Mr. William Byrne, brought suit against Alexander McDonald engineer on the Great Southern and Western Railroad to recover £500 for being expelled with violence from the guard van of a train about to leave Sallins on the evening of the Punchestown races. The plaintiff was awarded 6d, damages and 6s. costs.

Mrs Slattery whose husband was killed by the lamentable accident at the Lansdowne Railroad on the 9th of May was awarded £1,400 damages by the Grand Jury at the late Wicklow assizes.

Owing to the late arrival of our Irish exchanges, and the pressure of other matter upon our columns, we are unable to give as full a report as usual of Irish affairs.

UNITED STATES.

At Little Rock, (Ark.), on Saturday, at Fulton, Billy Ward and Butler fought a prize-fight, in which the latter got worsted in eleven rounds. Ward challenges the world to fight for five hundred dollars, to take place in Arkansas, three weeks after the articles have been signed. Marengo Joe is his backer. Australian Kelly and Happy Jack fought twenty-eight rounds at the same place on Monday. It was decided a draw.

The Coroner's jury in the case of Geo. Akin, the fireman killed by the Accident on the Baltimore and Potomac railroad, near Lafayette station, on the 13th inst., rendered a verdict censuring the engineer for non-observance of caution, and the conductor of the north-bound train, for not exercising a closer supervision and management of the road, and for failure in this particular instance to issue requisite instructions in reference to the delayed express train.

A terrible accident occurred on Sunday on the Chicago and Acton Railroad, caused by the collision of the night express going south, and a coal train coming north, both were running at considerable speed. Five passengers were killed outright, forty-one were badly scalded, some of them dangerously.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

The County Court of Multnomah county, Oregon, has granted the petition of Senator Hippel and changed his name to John H. Mitchell. An exchange suggests that as his name was Hippel when he married his present wife, she ought to make a similar application, as it don't look well for Mr. Mitchell and Mrs. Hippel to be living together as man and wife.

The Pacific Mail Company's steamer California reached San Diego on the evening of the 15th inst., from Guaymas. Her news confirms the capture of Lozada. He was taken near Tepic after an engagement in which three hundred were killed on each side. He was given two days in which to settle his worldly affairs, after which he was shot

A big day's thrashing was done one day last week in Napa county. In twenty hours and forty minutes 2,171 100-pound sacks of grain were thrashed. During the same time the thrashing machine was moved four times. The machine that did this, the biggest thrashing ever done in Napa county, is owned by Wm. Sweltzer and W. P. Rose.

FOREIGN NEWS.

A London letter says Minister Motley's friends have for some time known his health was delicate, and will not be surprised to learn that he is now confined to his hotel by a somewhat serious attack. He has had a slight paralytic shock. It occurred as Mr. Motley was taking Lady Margaret Beaumont down to dinner; his right arm suddenly fell powerless by his side, and the side itself was also somewhat affected. He was carried to his hotel in Dover street, and has not since left his room.

Late advices from Lima, report that a serious accident occurred sixty miles from that place. A body of earth, estimated at ten million cubic yards, fell from a mountain side into a valley, severely injuring a number of persons and damming up a river, the water in which had risen one hundred and nine feet above the usual height. Engineers were of the opinion that the water would soon burst its barriers, when it would rush toward Lima, sweeping everything before it and submerging the lower portion of that city.

The French Government has taken initiatory steps toward recognizing the Carlists as belligerents, having issued orders permitting the transit of arms and ammunition of war between the two Custom House lines in the south of France. A decree dated in March, 1805, which prohibited such transportation on the borders, is now rescinded by the Government, and the authorities have been notified by circular, thus enabling the Carlists to dispense with the use of a steamer and risk her capture.

There was a report when the steamer left Callao, that on the 28th the Peruvian laboring class would make an attack on the Chinese. The Pacific Steam Navigation Company employs them in preference to Peruvians, not so much for cheaper work as because they are more steady and docile than Peruvians.

Among the awards at the Vienna Exposition on Monday, were the following for the Pacific Coast: Joseph Neumann, of California, for cocoons; C. G. Watkins, of San Francisco, for photographs; G. P. Kuptel, of California, for minerals; Sutro Tunnel Company, of Nevada, for mine models.

A desperate engagement took place on Monday between a force of Carlists, numbering 240 men, and three columns of Spanish Republicans. The battle was fought in the open country between the towns of Berga and Cazeras, and resulted in the defeat of the Republicans, with the loss of two hundred men and one gun.

A Paris dispatch states that members of the Right propose submitting a constitution to Count de Chambord, and, if he accepts it, they will proclaim him King. If he refuse, the Republic will be definitely established.

During the past month the French Government has suppressed or forbidden the sale of twenty Republican newspapers in the provinces. The leaders of the Left intend to publish a protest against these suppressions, and question the Government on the subject when the Assembly meets.

The Carlists are slowly gaining ground.

FRANCE AND GERMANY.

A PROSPECT OF BREAKERS AHEAD.

Reviewing the recent grand Review, in which the army round Paris showed its new fashion of stepping out, a military fellow, who "Knew how it was and is himself," discourseth as follows:—There is forked lightning in the thunder cloud of France's hatred to Germany and her thirst for revenge. Aspirations for the revanche are not a mere brutum fulmen; that I think General Manteufel must have owed to himself, as he sat there incognito in plain clothes in a back row of the diplomatic tribune. The French mean to have another wrestle for the fall—that every one who knows the nation knows. But every one did not know what I think this review goes to show, that her military authorities are working assiduously for the end that when the combatants shall grapple, as grapple they must, the issue will not be, by a long way, so nearly a foregone conclusion as most people have been content to assume it. In ten years' time, in accordance with the dispositions of her new military law, she will be able to set in line over 800,000 men without calling out the reserves. With them her military strength will number 1,300,000 trained soldiers.

In the German war France was humbled, but not crushed. She will rise again, great and powerful as ever she was. France has been humiliated, but France is desperate, and there can be no doubt that she means to see it out with the Teutons. When the struggle comes—as come it must—the French people will be ready.

The French people do not emigrate, while the Teutons are emigrating in thousands, to avoid the military service which the brutal old Kaiser would impose upon them. Hans and Carl may be very patriotic, and no doubt they are; but we suppose they think it better patriotism to make "stamps" on the banks of the Hudson than to convert themselves into food for powder on the banks of the Rhine. They do not believe in the Kaiser. They can only regard him as an ambitious and cruel sovereign who, to gratify his wishes for the extension of his territory, would sacrifice, as he has already sacrificed, the lives of thousands of his fellow subjects; and every one of these subjects who leaves Germany and comes to the United States is a soldier withdrawn from the German army. Thus the military strength of Germany is being weakened, while that of France, from which country there is nothing that deserves the name of emigration, may be regarded as receiving additional force from the absence of an exodus and from the passionate desire that impels her to revenge.

The fall of France was like the fall of the Southern States; she fell because she was pounded to the earth with overpowering numbers. Man for man she would have whipped the Kaiser into the streets of Berlin, and scattered his forces like leaves in Autumn. The First Napoleon, with soldiers picked up among the shoeless and ragged population of Paris, inflicted awful disasters on the combined armies of Europe. The French are a nation of heroes; but, brave as they are, one Frenchman could no more hold out against three or four Germans than could one soldier of the Confederate army hold out against half a dozen Yankees, pelted at him according to the stern orders of General Grant. It was the business of France, when she went to war, to see that she was fit to do so; but she was deceived by those in whom she confided, and she has had to pay a dreadful penalty.

My sympathies as an Irishman, says John Reville, are with France, the old friend of Ireland, and if I was an American, it would be my pride to honor the country of Lafayette, which took so deep an interest and so materially aided in achieving the indepence of the United States, while hired Hessians were employed in the English lines in shooting down the patriots who had devoted their "lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor" to the establishment of the Republic. And if I was a "politician"—which, thank God, I am not—the expectation of getting votes from Germans would not induce me to renounce all sense of gratitude to the gallant nation that sent its brave men across the waters in the days of the Revolution to help in founding a free government where George the Third, by his obstinacy and pig-headedness, had forfeited the allegiance of many a noble and fearless soul.

England, Russia, India and the Shah.

"Free Lance," correspondent of the New York Herald, writing from London, and taking into consideration the arrangemeut by virtue of which the Shah got millions from Baron Reuter, on condition of giving him railroad privileges which he will utterly uproot when it pleases his Royal Highness, discourseth thus:

My speculation consists in conceiving a universal European war consequent upon the Shah's advertising engagement. And it can come about in this way: England and Russia are jealous of one another. Both want Persia, and neither will let the other become too influential in Asia. Russian journals are already lashing themselves into a fine frenzy, and calling "perfidious Albion" names. "It is a pretty story to take a lease of all Persia, through the medium of Baron Reuter, and then to pretend surprise," exclaims the Moscow Gazette. The English reply, "You're another." If Reuter seduces Indian or English capitalists, Russia will intrigue. It is only sixteen years since England wrested Herat from the Shah, with the intent to hold it. Russia is willing that Herat should belong to Persia; Russia will henceforth administer soothing syrup. Would it be very difficult to quietly get English companies into difficulties, or throw Baron Reuter into a gasometer, or chop off some English citizen's head, thereby rousing the English lion! Or, let us reverse the medal. Already Russia is beginning to play her game.

The Society for the Promotion of Russian Commerce and Industry has addopted the following resolution:

"In view of the great influence which will be exercised by the concession granted to Baron Reuter upon the commerce between Russia and Persia, the society will submit to the consideration of its Moscow committees during the fair of Nizhnee-Novgorod, several questions relative to the understanding between Baron Reuter and the Persian government, respecting the privilege of fixing the customs tariff, by which the treaties of commerce between Russia and Persia might be paralyzed."

Repulsed by England, Reuter embraced her enemy. England looks on suspiciously until India seems threatened. Expostnlations ensue, and a Benedetti plunges two empires into war for the sake of a third. Thereupon India sees her opportunity for freedom. Here, you see, are two fine wars. Well, then France and Germany renew hostilities.

United Workingmen's San Francisco CO-OPERATIVE

The above stamp is placed on the Goods made by this Boot and Shoe Manufacturing Company; and they desire to inform the Trade and the Public that an unprincipled Boot and Shoe firm of this city (a house doing a large business, and which ought to be above such a trick) are stamping their Worthless Chinese-made goods with a partial imitation of our Stamp, hoping to sell their goods as our make, and thereby injure our trade. We employ no Chinese labor, nor ever did, and our goods have always given satisfaction and built up a trade which those parties in their petty meanness are seeking to deprive us of. Therefore, we caution all who wish to buy our goods and patronize WHITE LABOR, to see that they are stamped as above.

Personality in Journalism.

EDITOR NATIONALIST: Sir—In my opinion, nothing is more natural than two rival journals, such as the Call and Chronicle, should in the present political crisis differ in opinion. It is also natural that in the excess of their political zeal, they should sometimes overstep the bounds of courtesy, which every honest journalist should respect; but it does not follow that each should make of the other's private business transactions a public affair, and an item of news. Day after day we find long and elaborate articles, in which the courteous editors endeavor to prove to the public that neither of them is included in the category of those who travel on the narrow way; but, on the contrary, is eminently suited to brighten the pages of our criminal history, ornament the Rogues' Gallery, and terminate a highly successful career on the scaffold. In the good old times when journalism was an art little understood, and appreciated but slightly, such a line of conduct would have been admissible. It would also be in keeping with the character of a frontier journal, whose editor wrote with one hand and held a loaded revolver in the other; but in this enlightened age, and in a community such as ours, we are strongly of opinion that it is entirely out of place, and acceptable only to a very small minority of the readers. However uncharitable it may be, I cannot help wishing—when I peruse the columns of our local daily journals, teeming with personalities and racy of Billingsgate—that the "code" had never been abolished. When duelling was fashionable, editors respected their readers and themselves, as the bones of many a fire-eating journalist who has filled an untimely grave can testify. Even now hot-blooded editors meet in mortal combat in France, but unfortunately in only too many instances they escape with very slight injuries to their reputations or themselves. In San Francisco, the use of vulgar language is a grave offence, as hoodlum offenders have long since discovered. It is impossible to allow our literati to meet with drawn swords or make a target of each other's bodies; why not then invoke the aid of Judge Louderback in suppressing those literary hoodlums who so often and persistently offend that the public is electrified when they stand on their good behaviour for forty-eight consecutive hours.

Persecuted beyond endurance, the journalistic worm of the Call has at length turned on his arch persecutor and returned blow for blow since the latter poured his flood of marvellously cheap maps on our devoted town. What success may attend his efforts it is impossible to say, but it would be looked on by all, save William Carr, Esq., and his band of devoted railroaders, as a wise dispensation of Divine Providence, if the Mephistopheles of the Chronicle and the Iago of the Call were run through the "Lightning Press" and consumed on a pyre of evening Bulletin's.

VERITAS.

GOVERNOR BOOTH.

Giving to our readers as we did, last week, the effective paragraphs of Governor Booth's oration, showing that California was going to somewhere hot or mighty unpleasant, it is but fair to give a hearing to a non-admirer of that gentleman; and therefore we give place to our friend Manning, of the Hollister Advance. In his peculiar urbane style, he gives the Governor credit for all he could be worth, and then goes after him with a thousand of brick overhead, which is one of the ways of erasing; and mind we don't write raising? If Mr. Booth feels hurt, he ought at least feel complimented by being compared to Æschines; but can any of the gods or any other buffer tell us (in the language of Dr. Bell) who is the Californian Demosthenes. This is what the Advance has to say of the first magistrate of our State:

"Governor Booth has the reputation of being a man of letters, and if eloquence alone and the copious use of tropes and figures constituted an orator, he would be entitled to be considered one. But, unfortunately for Newton Booth's oratorical reputation, other and greater qualities are necessary in the intellectual components required to produce an orator, and these are the homely ones of sound argument and common sense. Figures of speech and the unembarrassed use of elegant language are the garniture of oratory, but sense and argument are its essentials. Flights of eloquence captivate the multitude and capture their understandings, but thinking people look for something more than tinsel. A plausible exordium, how irrelevant soever, like Mr. Booth's theory of party affiliations, has the two-fold effect of conciliating an audience and fixing its attention. This is one of the essential arts of oratory, practiced by orator and sophist alike, the difference being that the orator makes his opening address to bear, however remotely, on his argument, while the sophist uses it to throw his hearers off their guard. This was the difference between Demosthenes and Æschines, it is the difference between oratory and sophism—the difference between common sense and the Governor's speech.

Notwithstanding a column and a half of such fine writing as the foregoing, nowithstanding the well-aimed attempts of his opponents, and even notwithstanding the pleasure or displeasure, which it is no business of ours to call into existence, we can't prevent him from being one of the most popular men in San Francssco,—at least among the young ladies who are twenty-five and over.

OFFICER ROGERS is making himself particularly obnoxious in the Chinese quarters. Before his advent, glaring gems of infamy and vice, relieved the monotony and intensified the odors of that portion of the city,—now like Atilla, his path is marked by closed doors, behind which hungry and humiliated celestials chew the bitter cud of dispair.

We have started with the above as a beginning for what we intend to make a standing Directory for all the Irish Organizations, military and civic, on this Coast. To enable us to supply omissions, and to make the Directory full and satisfactory, we respectfully call on the Secretaries of the different Irish societies of the city and the State to forward us at once the names of their officers, the time and place of meeting, the date of their organization, and whatever other information they may deem important. We will publish all matters of importance without charge.

THE HIBERNIA HALL, 246 Third Street, is newly fitted up in superb style, and fit for the accommodation of large social parties and military dis lays. It is one of the best Public Halls in the city. The new improvements deserve the attention of public speakers. In this Hall the movements of the audience create no noise. Silence is the ally of eloquence.

THE CHIEF OF POLICE.

In the contest now going on for Chief of Police, it is well to understand thoroughly the situation. There are a few points which we desire to present for the benefit of our readers, and which will prove, we think, of sufficient importance to merit the consideration of every honest-thinking man. We propose to analyze the official record of Chief Crowley, and show what work he has accomplished. During the seven years he has occupied the position of Chief of Police, there has not been a murder committed in this city but that the perpetrator has been arrested. This is a tally which should be recorded in his favor. It matters not whether a conviction has always followed, as this is a circumstance dependent entirely upon our Courts and Jury system. Not a single instance occurs where a robbery, forgery or other serious crime has been committed, that the offender has not been speedily brought before the seat of Justice. The proportion of stolen property recovered through the agency of the Police Force has been greater during this period, than in any other city in the United States. Another tally in favor of Crowley should be made when it is known that the supervision of the Detective Force is not entrusted to the care of a subaltern, as is the case elsewhere, but is under the personal command of the Chief himself. The experience displayed in this capacity, and the knowledge necessarilly required, might possibly be found in a merchant, but we think counting-house labor and detective service two separate spheres so essentially distinct, as to admit of no combination. Now as to the Force itself; we claim that the number of complaints preferred for such charges as are common in the East,—drunkeness, &c.—are infinitely small, and this we hold to be due entirely to the attention paid by the chief to the discipline of his men. As a result of this attention we find that our Police will compare most favorably with those of any other city, either in intelligence, ability, energy or discipline. The argument advanced by some in favor of a change is so fallacious as to deserve but little notice. "He has held the office long enough" say these discontents. Why there is not a State outside of our own, where the Chief of Police is an elective officer. In no large city other than this is the office subject to the caption of political convention. Proficency, experience, zeal and ability are the only qualifications required. In proof of this we need but glance at New York, Milwaukee and other Eastern cities. In the former we find a Superintendent of Police who held the position by appointment for thirteen years, and who has been lately re-appointed for a further term of two years; while in the latter city the present Chief of Police has held the position for twenty two years. It matters not how great may be the clamor for "revolution in office" in other departments, this is one in which this false cry should be frowned down, so long as the office continues to be filled as it now is, so creditably and satisfactorily.

JOHN HAMILL.

Among the many candidates before the people we know of none more deserving of popular support than the gentleman whose name heads this article. From our personal knowledge of Mr. Hamill, we feel justified in asserting that in the Legislature he will display the same unflinching opposition to monopoly, and the same earnestness in behalf of popular measures, that have heretofore characterized his private life. Fearless, eloquent and independent, he is such a representative as this city should have in the next Legislature.

The Patriotic Clergy.

We were favored yesterday with a visit by the Rev. E. Sheehy. Father Sheehy is a patriotic representative of the patriotic Bishop the Rt. Rev. Dr. Butler of Limerick. The Father visits this Coast for the purpose of delivering a series of Lectures, to obtain aid for the completion of the Cathedral of Limerick. We earnestly trust that he will receive such substantial indorsement, as will convince him that the Irishmen of California have a due appreciation of true patriotism. In our next number we shall furnish full information as to the time, place and subject of the first lecture in this city.

HON. C. C. SHEATS, member of Congress from Alabama, who will take his seat at the opening of the next Congress, is in this city on a flying visit. He is staying at the Grand Hotel.

POLITICAL SPEAKERS.

If Demosthenes lived at the present day he would be amused if not alarmed at the mushroom growth of incipient orators which a political campaign brings before the public. Of all ages, sects and nationalities, from the youth just emerging out of the congenial shade of his academy and recklessly plunging into the political maelstorm to the wary old veteran whom innumerable campaigns have rendered wise as a serpent and false as Satan; from the alien just naturalized, and intoxicated with his first taste of official sweets, to the cool and calculating native, disciplined in the political ranks, they make their bow and speek their part—some with a gravity which is ludicrous, others with an earnestness which is impressive, and all with the one great aim of serving their own interests. There are various types of political speakers; many of them are a thorn in the side of their audiences, but two in particular are an intolerable nuisance and should be effectually gagged whenever there is a ghost of a chance for doing so. One of these is the political orator who, confident in his experience, trips lightly to the rostrum, and prefaces his harangue with a pun which is only the fore-runner of a hundred others arranged with mathematical nicety. Before he has spoken five minutes he diverges from his subject, recollects that he has forgotten to ventilate the great joke of the evening, and, in endeavoring to recollect it, inextricably mires himself in the quagmire of inconsistency which besets the path of all unexperienced political speakers. The other type may be a thoroughly honest man—in most cases he is—but impressed with the necessity of exhorting the reporters from time to time how they shall give his oration to the public, he makes himself supremely ridiculous and incurs the enmity of the talented and witty, but alas! sarcastic gentlemen who represent the morning papers. He bores his audience whenever they allow him to do so—a political audience, however, rarely does—and when he finally retires he slinks away with the consciousness of having demonstrated himself a fool; and knowing that every digression will be carefully punctuated, every ghastly attempt at wit severely criticised, and the groans and derisive laughter of the audience religiously recorded in the morning papers. We are induced to make these remarks for the benefit of those patriotic gentlemen who pine for an opportunity to air their eloquence and serve their country.

THE MAYORALTY.

Mr. Otis the Tax Payer's candidate for Mayor is a gentleman whose record will bear the test of close analysis. His intimate connection for many years with one of our leading commercial houses in the capacity of manager, is sufficient evidence of his business qualifications and sterling integrity. Though closely wrapped up in his business, he has still devoted some time to the adminstration of municipal affairs, and has invariably taken a prominent position in every movement, calculated to advance the public weal.

As Supervisor he manifested a zeal and honesty, which at once won for him the respect and approbation of tax-payers generally. His career though eminently a successful one, was particularly free from the contaminations of political life, usually surrounding the office holder.

After serving several terms as Supervisor Mr. Otis retired to private life, having made a record, of which any man might justly feel proud. Again he is before the people for their suffrages; and not because of his own volition, but only at the earnest request of representatives of the vast commercial interests of the community did he consent to become a candidate. Of his eminent fitness for the position of Mayor there can be no doubt. Having all his interests centered in our community, there need be little fear that he would ever countenance any scheme, whether fostered by monopoly or individual. He will not, if elected, as we believe he will be, pander to party prejudices, and revolutionize our municipality by the removal of competent persons, to make room for friends. Finally be it said in his favor that he has ever held aloof from and discountenanced all such organizations as attempt to drag religion to the polls. Liberal minded, courteous, affable and educated, he is such a gentleman as should occupy the position of Chief Executive of San Francisco.

THE SHERIFF.

In these times of political excitement, it is meet and just that the journalist, in his capacity of public censor, should hold up to view such men as are deserving of popular recognition. It is likewise eminently proper that those whose merit entitle them to remain in the gutters should be "given a benefit" when they dare aspire to office. In the former category we place our friend P. J. White, who has received from two conventions the nomination for the office of Sheriff. His former experience in this capacity, together with the present opposition exhibited against him by that dastardly institution,—the "Crescents",—renders him particularly agreeable to us for the Shrievalty. The venting of personal spite through the columns of quasi respectable papers will effect the result but little; while the scintillations of billingsgate periodically hurled against respectable men will, in the case of P. J. White, be taken cum grano salis, and attributed to their proper sphere.

SHIELS OPERA HOUSE,—Joe Murphy is drawing good houses at this popular place of amusement; Mauw Cre is the attraction.

THE "NATIONALIST" AHEAD.

We have to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from our distinguished countryman, Gov. J. G. Downey of Los Angeles. In his very flattering and courteous communication, Governor Downey intimates a wish to become a stockholder of the IRISH NATIONALIST. We felt, from the beginning, that a thoroughly honest and reliable journal, liberal in its religious tone, would succeed, and eventually become a power in the land, supplying a want which has been long felt by the Irishmen on the Pacific Coast. That we were right in our conjectures, has been satisfactorily proved by the extensive patronage we receive. If further proof were necessary, the fact of such a prominent Irishman as Governor Downey tendering us, unsolicited, his support, clearly shows that we enjoy the confidence of our people and the respect of all: a trust which we shall never betray. Already we have a larger advertising patronage than any other weekly journal published on the Pacific Coast. This, with our very large subscription list, renders us more prosperous than many journals which have for years dragged out an ignoble existence, although placed before the public on a footing almost as good as ours. Before many weeks, we confidently expect to be in a position to supply our readers with correspondence from the principal cities of Ireland, also regular letters from Paris and London. Other improvements in our local department are also meditated; improvements which will, we are assured, meet with the approbation of our readers, and make the NATIONALIST acceptable in every Irish home. We do not expect the support of the Irish people of San Francisco because we sail under an Irish name, neither do we implore their assistance to save us from financial embarrassment; but we demand their support inasmuch as we successfully compete with our Eastern rivals in obtaining fresh and important news. Independently of this fact, as a local journal, and an acknowledged champion of their rights, we have a prior claim on our people. Every Irishman should subscribe for the NATIONALIST, and not only subscribe but constitue himself a canvasser amongst his friends. Our object is not to advance our own interest, but to exalt the Irish race—do in our humble way something towards establishing a republic on Irish soil and making our people respected and feared as a noble and powerful, but impulsive race.

THE TICHBORNE CASE.

It seems to be a pretty well established fact that the claimant to the Tichborne estates in England, who has attracted more attention than any other private individual for many years, is after all an impostor, and a very obtuse one at that. His real name is Arthur Orton, and he is a butcher by trade. Now, that an overwhelming mass of evidence has been adduced against him, proving to every intelligent man that he is not the real, long lost Baronet, the English public asks itself in blank astonishment how an illiterate plebeian could so effectually throw dust in their eyes. For years he has been feted, lionized and patronized by the snobby aristocracy and fawned on by toadying adherents till we firmly believe that at the present moment he half credits his own trumped up tale of shipwreck and adventure in many lands, with which he endeavored to account for his long absence and complete transformation. While he certainly deserves the contempt of every honest man we cannot help remarking that, standing convicted of the crime of perjury in the felon's dock, as we have no doubt he will eventually be, he is immeasurably the superior of his ardent admirer and supporter, Mr. Whally, M. P. This gentleman has come to America to hunt up evidence of the "claimant's identity with the long lost Baronet, not because Orton is his friend, or that if reinstated in the Baronety any benefits would accrue to him, but because he firmly believes that the claimant is the victim of a Jesuitical plot to rob him of his ancestral property and enrich the church of Rome. That any man of education holding an exhalted position in society should be so idiotically fanatical in this enlightened age is, we honestly confess, an unpleasant surprise to us. With such men in the British Parliament to oppose the advocates of religious and political liberty, it is not wonderful that Ireland be what it is.

FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

The experience of the past few months has demonstrated the fact that the Fire Department is under the absolute control of the "Crescent" organization. This branch of our Local Government is one of vital importance, and one which should be perfectly free from the prejudices of politics or sect. An opportunity is near at hand when, by an expression of the popular will, the rank bigotry and bitter intolerance of these "evangelists" will receive such a check as will crush for the future any attempt that may be made to ostracise any portion of our community, simply on account of their religious convictions. As we are perfectly convinced that our ideas on this subject are in harmony with those entertained by Messrs. Ford, Sloss and Edwards, we heartily hope they may succeed.

The Call in its issue of Thursday remarks that the subsidized organs of the railroad, studiously avoid three facts: First, that the people had to pay for the railroads; second, that in honest hands the railroads would have accomplished ten times as much for California; and, third, that the money stolen through the Finance and Construction swindle is constantly used to corrupt legislators and the Courts. All Stanford has, the people gave him, and now he uses these gifts against the people.

ENGLAND'S DECLINE.

In picking a quarrel with ill-armed and semi-savage tribes, England is simply immense, she invariably assumes a beligerent attitude whenever it is her interest to do so, or when there is any possibility that by sheer bullying, her opponents may be intimidated. She delights in browbeating an insignificant European power, or in aiding the victorious side in a great war when there is no possibility whatever of the tide of fortune turning in favor of the vanquished—but above all and before all she takes especial pleasure in manipulating the affairs of savage potentates, reaping rich rewards from their confiding disposition, dazzling them with the exhibition of her wealth and intimidating them by her power. It is not of late years that she manifested these symptoms of unscrupulous rapacity.

In her very infancy she was notorious for a cowardly, avaricious character. Centuries of power and success have made her only more rapacious, perfidious and tyrannical, until today she stands amongst the first nations of Europe, universally despised and reprobated. English journalists say that she holds a foremost position amongst the first nations of the earth—if she does it is by no means secure, and one which is every day becoming precarious. There was a time when England was feared if not respected—when her flag was acknowledged on every sea and her embassadors were demigods in the way. Fortunately that period belongs to the past. England's omnipotence is a matter of history and a legend; in a few years more it will be as mythical as the heroic deeds of the Vikings. Many of her old and cherished institutions have no longer the desired effect, even on the minds of her own people, and inspire foreigners with no other feelings than those of intense disgust.

DEATH OF LOZADA.

The Chronicle, speaking of the death of Lozada, says his life was an eventful one, and it found a fitting sequel in his tragic death. The prominent part he has played in Mexican history for the past fifteen years has made him a conspicuous figure. Without undertaking to venture a judgment on his career, or to analyze the motives which actuated him in his protracted rebellion against the lawful Government of his country, it cannot be gainsaid that, in leaving life, he gave a magnificent illustration of the sublime courage that was in him. The young Aztec vequaro, who, passing through all the vicissitudes of a stormy career; rose to the dictatorship of the State of Nayarit, was no ordinary man. The incident that turned the smooth current of his young life into the maelstrom of revolution, cannot be suffered to pass unnoticed by the impartial biographer who would give us an insight into the character of the dead Chieftain. It is related of Lozada, that while residing with his mother, near Tepic, the Chief of Police of that town, acting on misinformation, visited the Lozada homestead with the view of arresting Manuel on a charge of stealing cattle. Not finding the accused, he suspected that he was concealed, and demanded that the mother should disclose his hiding place. On her refusing to do so, she was stripped to the waist and lashed in a brutal manner. Soon after the officers' departure, Lozada returned from his visit to some distant village, where he had been unexpectedly detained, to witness the still bleeding wounds inflicted by the unfeeling wretch upon a widowed mother. The cause of his race became henceforth his own. His earliest resentments were hurled upon such individuals as had rendered themselves peculiarly obnoxious to his own people. The first man he put to death was the Chief of Police who had so inhumanly tortured his own mother. The killing of the Chief was followed by the plundering of several ranches, placing him at war with the authorities who, up to that time, had governed the district.

He meant revolution from the start. He finally succeeded in forming a coalition of all the towns and people of his tribe within the district under his command as principle chief. In 1858 he became the Dictator of Nayarit, and espoused the cause of the Monarchial party. In 1863 he gave in his adhesion to the empire, and was commissioned by Maximilian a General of Division, with headquarters at Tepic, holding that district safe for the imperial cause. From that time until the present year, Manuel Lozada was the ruling politic power of the District of Nayarit, which he organized into a State with its local Legislature.

AUGUST HEMME, Democratic candidate for the Legislature, is a man whom we fear will never form one of a "forlorn hope," or immolate himself at the altar of anti-monopoly. He displayed an amount of discretion at the Legislative Convention of which any man should feel proud, when he said "as he had never before been in politics he must be cautious what he said, else he would get into a scrape.' He redeemed himself somewhat when he remarked that he was going to the Legislature to serve the people. Should he get there, it is to be hoped that Mr. Hemme will manifest similar caution when dealing with the advocates of monopoly.

Colonel Bee and Governor Solomon, representatives of the Company recently formed in San Francisco for constructing a railroad from Tenino to Olympia, arrived last evening and met with an enthusiastic reception. Both gentlemen were serenaded later in the evening. Arrangements are now being made to donate to the Company several thousand acres of land now in the hands of a trustee.

HARRY BYRNE'S last resting place at Lone Mountain is in a deplorable condition. A movement is on foot amongst the friends of the talented dead to raise funds for the purpose of repairing the neglect. So much for the magnanimity of E. R. Carpenter.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Cockrill for Chief.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 20th, 1873.

EDITOR NATIONALIST:—As an ardent admirer of your strictly honest and fearless journal, you will, I am assured, afford me an opportunity of giving some reasons, which, to my mind appear cogent ones, why the Democratic candidate for Chief of Police should receive the support of the Irishmen of San Francisco. The Democratic candidate for Chief of Police is a gentleman eminently suited for that important position; one which has been filled for many years by the present incumbent with honor to himself and profit to the community. Unlike the latter gentleman, Mr. Cockrill has never identified himself with the Irish cause; but, on the contrary, stands aloof, honored and revered as a reputed chief of that shadowy band popularly known as the "Crescents." He is a firm believer in the policy of rotation in office, and in this respect he differs not from every politician who is literally "out in the cold." It is impossible for me to say whether, in the event of his election to office, he would like the majority of luminaries become a bitter opponent of the doctrine at present received with so much favor by his adherents.

The greater number of the present Police Force are officers of five, six, or seven years' experience. That they are intimate with the secret workings of the criminal portion of our community is evident from the facility and certainty with which offenders are brought to justice; that they are as honest as the general run of Municipal Police is demonstrated by the number of convictions which we see procured, and the extremely few charges of misdemeanor and dishonesty which have been preferred against them during the administration of the present Chief of Police.

It does not follow, however, that because of their efficiency, honesty and sagacity, they should be allowed to monopolize the emoluments of office for seven years more as they have done in the past; while outside the Force there is an abundance of athletic men, with a holy horror of manual labor, and an eagerness to serve their country in the humble capacity of Municipal Policemen. Outside the Chief's sanctum, there is a host of urbane, talented and high-toned gentlemen, with a chequered political career to recommend them to the public favor; gentleman, too, who are willing to bear for purely patriotic motives with all the ills and trials besetting the not too flowery path which should be trodden by the Chief of Police. I would like to give them all a chance, but I know of none more deserving of the office than the Democratic candidate, Mr. Cockrill. Of his dignity, courtesy and ability, it would be superfluous to speak. He is universally acknowledged a favorite with that high-flavored sect, yclept the "CRESCENTS," and this alone should be sufficient to recommend him to the Irish people of this city; therefore, to all lovers of civil and religious liberty, should he be elected to office, I feel assured that he will in no respect disappoint the expectations of his friends. Elect him then by all means; and, when the guillotine has done its work, we shall have a powerful band of disorganized, inefficient and unexperienced policemen, the terror of the city and the delight of the Barbary Coast. Yea more, we shall have in the Police Department a millenium, in which sectarianism and political ostracism must rejoice.

Faithfully yours,

JEREMIAH.

P. S.—There may be something in a name, but mine must not be connected with Jeremiads, or with putting up jobs to secure votes for police officers who don't know anything of the business.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—This ever popular place of amusement is nightly filled with enthusiastic audiences to witness the inimitable acting of Miss Charlotte Thompson, of whose merits as a highly gifted and accomplished artiste, it would be superfluous to speak. The overflowing houses which Miss Thompson invariably draws are the best evidence of the appreciation of the talents by the play-goers of San Francisco. On the occasion of her benefit, which took place on Friday evening, a more than usually crowded house greeted Miss Thompson on her appearance in the title role of Bulwer's ever-attractive, "Lady of Lyons." Madeline to-night and the grand romantic and spectacular drama of The Sea of Ice on Monday with Miss Thompson in the character of "Organita."

TIM MCCARTY appeared before the Democratic Legislative Convention on Thursday night. Some irreverent scoundrels indulged in unrestrained mirth, when he stepped on the rostrum, but the "Achilles of the Board" was not to be "put" out by such unseemly hilarity. His eloquent speech which occupied, one minute and a half was received with enthusiasm.

A NEWSPAPER reporter was arrested in Sacramento last week for embezzling sixty dollars. He received the rudiments of his education on the Chronicle and graduated in the Call office. Had he been educated on the Post we fear he would ere this have claimed the attention of Sheriff Adams, and afforded another opportunity to the Rev. Kiss Me Charles to display his fine talent for the melo-drama.

JEREMIAH CLARKE stated on Wednesday night at the Legislative Convention that he accepted the nomination with pride and a throb of pleasure. After he has been interviewed by a score or two of finance committees his patriotic spirit will, we fear, be considerably chastened.

CITY NEWS OF THE WEEK.

THE leading journals of San Francisco appear to be impressed at the present time, with the necessity of conciliating their suffering patrons by munificent donations of twenty-five cent maps and artistic seventeen cent chromos. We are informed on the most reliable authority that the Call has given an order for ten thousand lithographs, to be distributed gratuitously to its readers. The subject will be strictly allegorical representing Mr. Pickering on a carrier's mustang rampant, and tilting a la Don Quixote at a railroad Carr. The Sketch has been executed by a talented local artist whom Mr. Pickering has suitably rewarded. The Post which is a splendid imitator, has followed suit, and will, at an early date reward its fifty charter members with a stupenduous work, on the Land Question splendidly bound, also a complete series of Bob Goodwin's celebrated Anti-Chinese Resolutions. The Nationalist is not behind the age, for we have already in press a carefully compiled work on the science of political and social Bummerology from the pen of a talented local editor, whom years of constant practice in the ennobling science have rendered perfect. That he is equal to the task a host of irate landlords and sorrowing friends from the Orient to the Occident can testify. Like our friend the Chronicle we say then unto you, "subscribe for it, buy it," lose no opportunity of studying a science which has rendered Emperor Norton illustrious.

THE splendid painting which so well portrays the lineaments of the departed and lamented patriot, Terrence Bellew McManus, is now on exhibition at the picture store of Kenny & Co., Windsor Building, Fifth and Market streets. In acknowledgement of its excellence, as well as to show that the spirit of Irish patriotism is not altogether dead, the sale of tickets for the benefit of Miss McManus, previously large, has been during the past few days redoubled. We should say that no good Irishman, having a half dollar to spare will be without a ticket to secure his chance for a prize so valuable.

To the inventive genius who first organized a piece club is due the undying gratitude of thousands of defunct politicians and millions of seedy ones yet to come—It requires no high order of executive ability to engineer a piece club: all that is necessary to insure success is a strictly dishonest president, an idiotic vice-president, an urbane secretary and a thoroughly unscrupulous finance committee—All that such a team requires when sustained by unbounded cheek and unlimited bad whiskey, is a fair field and no favor.

ST. IGNATIUS' COLLEGE.—At a meeting of the "Philistorian Debating Society," held August 16th, 1873, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: President, Mr. J. Sasia, S. J.; Vice-President, Jas. Boland; Recording Secretary, N. P. Wynne; Corresponding Secretary, T. F. Donovan; Treasurer, E. Y. O'Day; Librarian, Jas. J. O'Connor; Assistant Librarian, Jno. J. Donovan; Censor, D. V. Kelly. Committee on business—James Boland, JEO. T. Fogarty, Alf. T. Kelly.

THE low comedian of the Post derives the largest portion of his magnificent salary by writing up the "Mill of Justice" (reporters' rhetoric for the Police Court.) We suspect his inspiration is drawn from another "Mill," where the Judge presides in a starched linen coat, and where the lawyers plead ofttimes in incoherent language, and always with their hats on their heads.

THE chivalrous defenders of the dumb animals last week published their annual report. The society has fifty officers wearing badges. Still the children of this life meet in their secluded dog pits, mercilessly belabor weak-kneed mustangs, or turn venerable steeds on the mercy of the world to fatten on some extensive lot, luxurious with its growth of sand.

AT the meeting of the Democratic Legislative Convention, on Wednesday night, it was formerly announced that Obadiah Livermore was sick. We intend it as no personal allusion when we say that a large number of unsuccessful candidates are in a similar predicament.

DE WITT STUBBLE, the talented editor of the Castroville Argus, who is sojourning at the American Exchange, mislaid his carpet-bag, and in his search for it, brought up in the Police Court. This little mishap has made serious inroads on the scanty supply of wit which our local journalists possess.

LOTTIE HENRY slapped Eugene Henry on the face last week, and would have languished in the City Prison awaiting trial for the offence, had not our friend Major Jack Stratman with a gallantry as great as the fame of his moustache gone bail for her to the amount of $50.

THE name of Daniel O'Connell of the Post has been mentioned in connection with the Coroner's office, so says the Call in its locals of Thursday. We fear one of his first duties in the event of his election will be to enquire into the sad and sudden demise of the Post.

UNDER SHERIFF HARRY D. LAMMOT, fell a victim to the displeasure of Sheriff Adams on Wednesday. Harry is now numbered amongst the noble band who indulge in language not to be found in the Scriptures when James' name is mentioned,

THE witty local of the Call is indulging in flights of fancy, which we fear will prove too much for the gravity of his melancholy chief.

THERE are nineteen blocks yet to be crossed, before the Montgomery Avenue will extend to Selby's smelting works at North Beach.

JAMES NEAL was found insenible at a late hour in the vicinity of the Golden Gate Park, Wednesday night, whiskey induced the attack.

OUR small and would-be vivacious friend, the Post, last week took us severely to task for presuming to write our local news in a manner which, it was pleased to remark, was original and witty. We were long since aware that the Post was jealous of the NATIONALIST'S "large and constantly increasing circulation;" but we never imagined for a moment, that such abject fear of our growing influence, which, as a reliable, fearless and readable journal, we possess, prevailed in the office of our lively friend, and paralyzed its gigantic intellect. While we thank our little friend for the very delicate compliment, we would respectively suggest that better is it for the Post to meet the Sheriff with Christian humility and resignation than to vent its spleen in peurile paragraphs. Even now a sunny spot is being staked off for its final reception in Mr. Pickering's cemetery, and unless Billy Carr or the Colorado Railroad intervenes, the funeral wreaths which Deacon Fitch in his anxiety has prepared, will not wither ere the hairs of our exceedingly lively friend be brought down with bankruptcy to the grave.

ADVERTISE! ADVERTISE!!

A reference to the list of stockholders in the Nationalist Printing and Publishing Company will suggest to business men the advisability of advertising in the "IRISH NATIONALIST," as each shareholder considers himself a solicitor for the paper, and on the principle of "Live and let Live" have determined to carry it out in all their mercantile transactions. We throw out this hint hoping that business men, knowing the large and increasing influence of the NATIONALIST, will consult their own best interest by taking our advice:—ADVERTISE!

A glance at the subjoined table will indicate the position of the advertisements of our patrons. This table will remain at the head of our columns for reference, thus adding an extra advantage to advertisers.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

X. TWIABA X.

THE WHITE SAGE.—A new preparation is offered to the public for the restoration of the hair by Dr. L. Terry, 323 Third street, and from the great number of testimonials published by prominent citizens of Elko, Nevada, of its efficacy in giving strength to the hair, and the speedy return of it to those who have been bald, oblige us to look upon it with more favor than the thousand other preparations already in the market. The Elko Independent says: "A decoction of White Sage will accomplish more in restoring bald heads, fastening falling hair and renovating and giving healthy action to the scalp than a whole store of the usual remedies advertised for that purpose. Hundreds now in Nevada can testify to this fact, and a trial will convince any doubting Joseph that what we say of it in this respect will be borne out by results, if he will give it a fair trial." If such is the case, the Doctor will reap a rich harvest, for no other city can boast of as many bald-headed people as San Francisco. The medicine can be obtained from every druggist. None genuine without the signature of L. TERRY, M, D., on the outside of the wrapper. HEATHFIELD, BOGEL & Co., General Agents. Sole Distiller, DR. L. TERRY, Elko, Nevada.

PICTURES.—By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that our friends Kenny & Co. have taken and fitted up in superb style a large store in the new hotel building corner of Fifth and Market streets. They have lately returned from the East, bringing with them a large and well-assorted stock of pictures of more than common style of art. Their lengthened experience in the trade has enabled them to offer superior drawings, chromos, prints, and framed pictures at a moderate rate. They have now on exhibition pictures of a hundred classes and representative of scenery and life in all climes. When inspecting their varied stock, we naturally gave most attention to what was Irish. We found the Giant's Causeway, Vale of Avoca, Lakes of Killarney and other familiar places as they should be, as well as several delineations of muscular Christianity, which should be seen to be appreciated.

GARLAND'S VEGETABLE COUGH DROPS are now acknowledged to be the best remedy known for all Throat and Lung Complaints. Physicians and all that have ever used them recommend them.

DR. BRENAN,

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN,

Physician, Surgeon and Lecturer,

LATE OF PHILADELPHIA, THE FOUNTAIN HEAD of all medical science in this country, who has spent the last thirteen years in travelling through all the principal cities in Europe and the United States, giving lectures and treating some of the most complicated and long-standing diseases, has now permanently located himself in San Francisco, at

127 Montgomery Street,

Opposite the Occidental Hotel entrance. Although DR. BRENAN may differ considerably in his practice from many members of the Profession, yet, he is possessed of the highest credentials from the most learned and celebrated Medical Colleges in the country; and all who have attended his lectures bear witness to the clear and lucid manner in which he defines every portion of the human frame, giving the reasons for the various diseases which the tissues of the human body are subject to, and illustrating every portion of the human system by the simple aid of a black-board, thereby proving himself to be thoroughly acquainted with the anatomy of the human configuration. On these lectures the Press of all our large cities have showered the highest encomiums of praise; and DR. BRENAN has been also greatly complimented by the leading physicians of the day. He has devoted much of his time and research to the diseases of the nervous system and reproductive organs, and also to general and nervous debility. And for this purpose DR. BRENAN spent several years in Paris, where the best facility is offered for the thorough investigation of the cause of these most complicated diseases. Nasal Catarrh and other diseases of the throat and chest, have also been the subject of special lectures delivered throughout the country. The Doctor, therefore, offers his services with confidence to all the afflicted of humanity who may suffer from any of the complaints incidental to the human frame. In addition to his own professional office and consultation room, the Doctor has also secured parlors affording every convenience for the accommodation of ladies and gentleman separately.

Office, 127 Montgomery street, opposite the Occidental Hotel entrance. Office Hours—9 to 12 and 1 to 5; in the evenings, 6 to 8.

Correspondence will be promptly answered, and a list of printed questions forwarded to patients in any part of the United States, and by the answers DR. BRENAN can tell the disease almost as readily as by seeing the patient. Post Office Box 291. aug23-1y

THE MALAKOFF MARSEILLAISE.*

Three times the Frenchmen charged, with cheers to win the Malakoff;
Three times they rolled in tumult down, and heard the Russian scoff.
What's to be done? Their hearts grow cold—that vive l'empereur,
Falls faint and dead—a broken spell, a battle-cry no more.
Ah, one there was—remembered still—of glory's brighter days—
They murmur, they pronounce a name—that name, the Marseilleise!
From man to man,
The whisper ran,
"Long live the Marseillaise!"

The murmur grows, they talk aloud, "Our father's song!" they cry,
"Heard round their lovely tri-color, in the gallant times gone by;
O'er battle-fields and battered walls they sung it, marching free
From the Alps and the Pyrenees, all round, to the rolling Zuyder Zee;
We'll try the conquering charm, this day, and through its port-holes' blaze,
We'll give you that bloody Malakoff—but give us the Marseillaise!"
Says a brown zouave:
"My chief let us have
One touch of the Marseillaise!"

Grave looks the stout Pelissier, when he hears the startling word,
Says "Nonsense! Go!" but well I know his Frenchman's heart was stirred.
"Those English fly from yon Redan: they're quashed, and on my soul,
Unless I win our Malakoff, good-bye Sebastopol!
Well, form them, in God's name, afresh, and let the bands," he says,
"If they've recovered wind enough, lead off the Marseillaise.
What can I say?
'Tis our Frenchman's way.
So sound the Marseillaise!"

'Twas done; zouaves and voltigeurs, and soldiers of the line,
Chimed in with the old Republic's March—the war song of the Rhine;
And then the charge—the last wild charge! down tumbles Bosquet bold;
Heaven rest the dead—on, soldiers, on! MacMahon's in the hold!
Ne'er sung that air to nobler feat, through battle's fiery haze;
Well may the Czar, and his men of war, lament the Marseillaise!
Says Gortschakoff:
'Tis time to be off,
They're singing the Marseillaise!"

Brave song, be heard, all undeterred, an omen and a sign,
Beyond the despot's guarded camp, beyond the beleaguered line;
Lead yet a wilder, worthier strife—a mightier fortress far
Against our banner still holds out, on the deadlier heights of war;
And sound again, bold melody! for baffled millions raise,
The last victorious rallying cry; the nation's Marseillaise!
Once more advance!
In the vanward France,
To the roar of the Marseillaise!

*The facts stated in the text, though hushed up as much as possible by Napoleon's goverament at the time, was mentioned in Paris by the soldiers on their return from the Crimea. After their repulses before the Malakoff the troops demanded the Marseillaise air, and the general did not venture to refuse them at such a moment. The bands played the tune, and the soldiers, under Bosquet and MacMahon, took the place.

O'Donnovan Rossa.

In a recently published chapter of his Prison Life, O'Donnovan Rossa gives us a broad hint as to the course which Irish nationalists might with advantage adopt if they should be elected to the London Parliament. When informed by the Governor of the English prison in which he was immured that the people of Tipperary had made him their member, he indulged in a little Irish wit by asking for a transfer to Milbank jail as convenient to the House of Commons, so that he might attend his Parliamentary duties at night after picking his bit of oakum during the day.

He says:—"One or two of my companions took the matter seriously, and I thought I would be really taken before the House. They kept discussing what I was to do; whether I would take the oaths, or refuse to take them; become a member, or continue a rebel.

"If this were worth a serious thought—if I were taken before the House, I think I would be found talking Irish to them, and if they would not understand me—why! let them get an interpreter.

"I was an Irishman, represented an Irish county, and had a right to be heard in the language of my country. This may be a new idea for the members who are now discussing what is the best thing for them to do in the House; whether to vote or not to vote, whether to go there or remain away altogether. Let them speak Irish, and insist on speaking it in the House. That may be thought ridiculous, but it is not a bit more ridiculous than to think the votes of a hundred Irish members can get an independent Irish Government against the votes and the prejudices and the interests of five or six hundred English and Scotch members."

Statistics of London.

The area of London, consisting of the metropolitan districts 688¼, and the city police district 1⅛, is 690 square miles. The population from the census tables of 1871, of the metropolitan police district is 3,110,744, and the estimated increase to this date, 1873, 140,018; the city police district is 74,897, affording a total population of 4,025,659. The total length of streets and roads patroled by the metropolitan police is 6,612 miles, and the addition or increase in the length of streets during ten years past is 3,623 as the crow flies, from London to Point de Galle, the distance is 6,600 miles. Teheran is in a direct line between these two places, 2,800 miles from London, and 3,800 miles from Point de Galle. The number of inhabited houses in the metropolitan police district is 519,489, in the city police district, 9,305—giving a total of 528,794.

CHAPTER IV.

Having shown that the object of the Society of United Irishmen was to reform the Irish parliament, and to abolish sectarian distinctions and quarrels, by equalizing all religions, and procuring emancipation for the Irish Catholics, we must now take a rapid sketch of the criminal and tyrannical proceedings of a few foreign or English villains, calling themselves government and the Irish traitors, who were leagued with them, and had entered into a great conspiracy to abolish the Irish constitution of 1782, to corrupt and sell the Irish Parliament, and to reduce Ireland to the degraded condition of an English province.

Americans very properly hold it as a true maxim, that "taxation without representation is tyranny." Now if this definition be a sound one, the Irish Volunteers would have been perfectly justified in 1782, if they had disowned the corrupt Irish Parliament, and elected a new one. In fact, the Americans, because England dared to tax them in an English parliament, where they were not represented, resisted such foreign tax-masters by force, and finally thrashed the English and Hessian murderers out of America. Since which event, the United Americans have, as a reward for their virtuous conduct, become the first nation in the world.

When the National Association of United Irishmen began to preach the rational doctrines of reform and representation, instead of any concessions being made to them, things, on the contrary, became every day worse and worse.

In 1793, a most infamous bill, the "Convention Act," was manufactured by the knot of corrupt villains and jobbers in the pay of England, calling themselves representatives of the Irish nation, parliament, &c. This bill was intended to crush all popular liberty, as is shown by its title, which runs thus: "An act to prevent the election or appointment of assemblies' purporting to represent the people, of any description of the people, under pretence or preparing or presenting petitions, complaints, remonstrances, and declarations, and other addresses to the king, or to both or either Houses of Parliament, for alteration of matters established by law, or redress of alleged grievances in Church and State," &c. The Gunpowder Bill was also passed this session of 1793. The object of this act was to deprive the Irish people of ammunition, &c, which they as men, by nature have as much right to manufacture and possess as the English, or French, or Americans have.

During this year an Act was also passed, to raise 16,000 Irish militia, and also to raise 5,000 regular troops, in addition to the old regular Anglo-Irish establishment of 12,000 men. Thus the United Irishmen seeing that they could obtain nothing by constitutional means, were obliged as men, in self-defence, to seek other means, just as the English did in the reign of Charles the First, when they rose up against their own king, whose head they cut off; or as they did in the reign of James the Second, his son, whom they drove off the throne.

On the 4th of March, 1794, Mr. Ponsonby introduced into the Irish House of Commons, a bill for amending and improving the state of the representation of the people in parliament, but in the second reading the bill was postponed to a future day by a majority of 98. In the beginning of 1795, however, a sudden change took place in Irish affairs, and on the 4th of January, Lord Westmorland, the English military, Viceroy of Ireland, was recalled to England. The murmurs and discontents that had for some time prevailed among the Irish Catholics and Dissenters, now excited the most serious alarms in England. The secret connections subsisting between the Irish patriots and the French revolutionists, frightened the English, who saw clearly, that if the French allies once landed in Ireland, they could easily enable that country to recover its ancient independence, and to form itself into a republic, just as the American colonists had done a few years before In this critical juncture, Earl Fitzwilliam was appointed Viceroy of Ireland. His inclinations to reform measures rendered the appointment very popular with the Irish nation; and Earl Fitzwilliam, on his arrival in Ireland, was received with universal approbation.

The Irish parliament met on the 22d of January, 1796, and unamiously voted Lord Fitzwilliam the most favorable addresses; and on the 9th of February agreed to the amplest supplies that had ever been granted by an Irish parliament. At the desire of the Catholics, Grattan moved, on the 12th of February, for leave to bring a bill for the relief of persons professing the Roman Catholic religion, which was agreed to by the House after a very trifling opposition, and Messrs Grattan, Ponsonby, Knox, and Forbes, were appointed to prepare the bill.

But the universal satisfaction of the Irish, arising from the expected emancipation of the Catholics, and the abolition of all sectarian quarrels and distinctions, was suddenly damped by the intelligence that arrived two days after the passing of the motion, that the English ministers were averse to the measure. Lord Fitzwilliam informed them of the great danger that would infallibly result from retracting the assent so formally given to a motion of such importance, and explicitly refused, by taking upon him that office, to be the person "to raise a flame which nothing but the force of arms could put down." Such were his own words.

In consequence of this answer he was dismissed from his post, which was conferred upon Lord Camden, a most detestable tyrant.

The universal dissatisfaction of the Irish at the removal of Lord Fitzwilliam was soon manifested in a very serious manner. Tumults arose in several places, which were not quelled without the intervention of the military. Even from the most moderate of the disaffected, addresses were presented to Lord Fitzwilliam, with indignation on account of the treatment he had experienced, and teeming with invectives against the authors of his disgrace. From this period may be dated that deep and settled spirit of discontent, which rapidly increased to the highest pitch of violence, and pervaded both Catholics and Dissenters, and was even felt by numbers of Protestants themselves. The resentment of the Irish public was strongly marked when Lord Fitzwilliam took his departure from Ireland on the 25th of March. It was a day of general gloom; the shops were all shut no business of any kind was transacted, and the whole city was put in mourning. His coach was drawn to the water-side by some of the most respectable citizens, and the people seemed intent on every demonstration of grief.

In 1796, another tyrannical measure, called "The Insurrection Act," was introduced into the Irish parliament. By this infamous bill, any seven ruffians, called justices of the peace, if bribed, and in the pay of a foreign or English government, had only to go through the form of signing a piece of paper, stating that they considered their country in a state of disturbance, "or in danger of becoming so." On sending this piece of paper, according as directed, to the English Castle of Dublin, Ship street, where the secret committee or privy council, and the English military viceroy, held their nocturnal meetings, the county so recommended was proclaimed, or put under martial law, which was signified to the unfortunate people by a bit of paper, with "Whereas" at the top, and some Englishman's name at the bottom.

"Lo, the Poor Indian!"

The Milford Bard thus eloquently discourses on the gradual extinction of the American Indians: Though they were the children of the forest, and though they left no monuments of sculpture, painting and poesy, yet great were they in their fall, and sorrowful is the story of their wrongs. They once had cities, but where are they? They are swept from the face of the earth. They had their temple of the sun, but the sanctuary is broken down, and the beams of the deified luminary extinguished. It is true, they worshipped the Great Spirit and the Genius of storms and darkness; the sacred pages of revelation had never been unrolled to them—the gospel of the Saviour had never sounded in the ears of the poor children of the forest. They heard the voice of their God in the morning breeze; they saw him in the dark cloud that rose in wrath from the west; they acknowledged his universal beneficence in the setting sun, as he sank to his burning bed. Here another race once lived and loved—here, along these shores, the council fire blazed, and the war-whoop echoed among their native hills; here the dark-browed Indian once bathed his manly limbs in the river, and his light canoe was seen to glide over his own loved lakes. Centuries passed away, and they roved the undisputed masters of the western world. But at length a pilgrim bark, freighted from the East, came darkening on their shores. They yielded not their empire tamely, but they could not stand against the sons of light—they fled. With slow and solitary steps they took up their mournful march to the West, and yielded with a broken heart their native hills to another race. They left their homes, and the graves of their fathers, to explore the western woods, where no human foot had ever trod, and no human eye ever penetrated. From time to time they have been driven back, and the next remove will be to the bosom of the stormy Pacific. Unhappy children!—the tear of pity has been shed over your wrongs and your sufferings. What bosom but beats with sympathy over the mournful story of their woes. As a race of men, they are fast fading from the face of the earth, and ere many centuries shall have passed, they will have been swept from the annals of ages. Ere long, the last wave of the West will roll over them, and their deeds only live in the traditions they shall have left behind them. The march of mind hath been to them the march to the grave. Every age they have rapidly declined, and a lingering remnant is now left to sigh over the ruins of their empire and the memory of their brave progenitors. The golden harvest now waves over the tombs of their fallen fathers, and the forest that once echoed to the war-dance is now covered with the rising city. Where the wigwam once stood, the tall temple, dedicated to God, now glitters in the setting sun—and the river, unrippled by the Indian canoe, is now white with the sails of commerce. And when they shall have passed away—when the last Indian shall have stood upon his native hills in the West, and shall have worshipped the setting sun for the last time, perhaps some youth may rove to the green mound of Indian sepulture, and ask with wonder what manner of beings they were.

How must the poor child of the forest weep, and how must his heart throb with anguish, when he muses on the ruins of his race and the melancholy destination of his children. The plowshare hath now passed over the bones of his ancestors, and they sleep in the land of the stranger, and of the conquerors of their dying race. Methinks I see the stately Indian, as he bends from the brow of the misty mountain, and surveys with a swelling heart the once extended limits of the Indian empire. The grief of years is in his soul, and he bends his knee in meek submission before the Great Spirit in the clouds. Unhappy child!—my soul mourns over the ruined hopes of your faded race.

Spanish Insurgents attempted to enter Portugal on Monday across the frontier, but were closely watched and driven back by Porugtuese troops.

A Pot-House Patriot.

English novelists have always found a fertile theme for their satire in that loud-mouthed, illiterate and socialistic being who calls himself the workingman's friend, but who is, in reality, the laborer's worst enemy. He is generally a demagogue, has confused ideas on the subject of right and wrong, and always presents the rich man in the light of a tyrant and the poor man as his long-suffering and helpless victim. He believes in the equalization of wealth, and is for depriving the moneyed class of the riches it has honestly earned in order to share them with the less fortunate; or, in other words, with those who are like himself too idle to work if a livelihood may be earned by any other means. The English workman has been cursed by one of these drones for the past few years, in the person of a Mr. George Odger, who has proved a thorn in the side of employers, and the bane of his unlucky dupes. He has delivered seditious speeches out of number, and has developed some theories regarding the relative positions of labor and capital which would, if carried out, send every employer to the poor-house and every laborer to starvation. Yet his victims believed in him and afforded him a handsome living, even when they themselves were almost in want of the common necessaries of life. He fomented strikes and has been the principal agitator and the spokesman of the labor revolts in England for some three years. His melodramatic oratory and his specious sophistry were dear to the people upon whose feelings he played. The mischief he has done is almost incalculable. Urged to temerity by the success he achieved in exciting revolts among the working classes, he aimed at higher game, and at length attempted to sow the seeds of Communism among his ignorant and deluded followers. While depreciating the profuse banquets of the rich, and lauding the frugal fare of the poor, he dined at expensive restaurants, and paid for his meals with the money he drew from the treasury of the "strike funds." He was the shallowest of vulgar demagogues, the most ridiculous of agitators, and yet the power he wielded was enormous.

This Brummagem philanthropist and blustering patriot has at length come to grief in the bankruptcy court. He meddled with politics and incurred considerable expense by electioneering; and lost a libel suit against the London Figaro, the taxed bill of costs for which was more than he could afford to pay. His misfortunes have not arisen from any causes that entitle him to the slightest sympathy; but he will nevertheless manage to make capital out of it. He has now a magnificent theme upon which to to enlarge, and we may shortly expect to hear of him in a new crusade against the tyranny of the law and the evils of oligarchies. This man, together with Bradlaugh and others of the same class, are injuring the cause of the working man by the intemperate and unreasonable principles they instil, and the bad advice they give and, unfortunately, too often cause to be followed. We only refer to the case because we have of late seen a tendancy on the part of the laboring classes in this country to place themselves under the leadership of such men as this Odger, who has found many imitators here. The mischief they perform is almost incalculable, and yet such is the impression they manage to produce upon their followers that it is almost impossible to counteract their effects by any reasonable means.

They appeal to the worst passions of their dupes, and when they have once gained the the ascendancy for which they toil, the interest of labor suffer from one end of the country to the other. Strike follows strike, employers are needlessly embarrassed, and workmen lie idle from mere wantonness, and at a pecuniary loss and a suffering that are painful to reflect upon. Nine times out of ten the workmen act against their better judgment, and then speedily show signs of repentance for their hasty action; but their spirits are excited and their flagging courage strengthened by the braying invective of their leaders. This deservedly unlucky demagogue, Odger, is a fair type of the whole class, which has nothing to lose and everything to gain by the course it pursues. Whether the laborers are in or out of employ the salaries of the Odgers, as officers of the trades-unions, go on without abatement, and in cases where a general strike results their pay increases. They have hitherto been successful in uniting labor against capital. Let those most interested take heed that they do not likewise equally succeed in uniting capital against labor.

The Duke of Edinburgh.

This young gentleman whom the Post has undertaken in a mock American fashion to indorse, and whom the British democracy undertook to denounce in a loud-voiced meeting, is deserving of such consideration that we will let the correspondent of the N. Y. World tell a little of what he thinks:—The Duke of Edinburgh is, of all the royal princes, the one least esteemed and the one most disliked. You will hear in the clubs and in society the most disgraceful and ludicrous stories about him. Many of these turn upon the economical passsion of this young gentleman, for,

"Although on pleasure he was bent,
He had a frugal mind"

from his boyhood up. While he was a midshipman he turned many an honest penny by selling the photographs of his royal mother, upon which he had persuaded her to write her name, to his shipmates and others at 10s. 6d. each. The money thus received, with other sums supplied to him by his loying parent, he often loaned out at usurious interest to his young companions of the gun-room, taking precious good care to exact principal and interest at the maturity of the debt. The thrifty habits thus acquired have not been laid aside in later years, and to-day this prince of the blood and the son-in-law of the Czar is actually in partnership with a well-known money-lender of the city, a Mr. L——. You can imagine what disgust such facts as these. which are widely known, inspire in the breasts of the people who are now represented as "thanking heaven on their bended knees, with grateful hearts, for the happiness of their noble sailor-prince." Nor is this the worst of it: The Prince has been a debauche—although his liasons are said not to have been of the more expensive kind—and it has been with the utmost difficulty that the aversion of the Empress of Russia and of her poor daughter to this match has been overcome. One of his latest amours has been with a notorious actress of the opera bouffe—a woman whose ill-fame is world-wide, and who long since lost whatever personal charms she may have once possessed.

San Francisco Tweeds.

In one of the short but pithy editorials, the Call in the early part of the week, told what every nine out ten American Newspaper readers already knows, namely that only a few years ago Bill Tweed, was lionized in New York society and that his friendship, (if it took no more tangible shape) was accounted a distinguished honor by men occupying the highest position and moving in the most exclusive circles of society. "Where now" demands the Call in its highly melo-dramatic style, "are the men who moved at Bill Tweed's command, and where will be the William Tweeds of San Francisco four years hence?" We are very much surprised that a talented journalist, a thorough man of the world and gentleman, who, if the Chronicle speaks aright, has dabbled most successfully in the Pool of Politics, like Mr. Pickering, should ask such a question. The average schoolboy could have told our friend the Call, that four years hence the wily diplomatists who cause him so much uneasiness, will, if they foliow in the footsteps of the notorious "Boss," be in position to retire from the political arena with a princely competence, if not with honor. They will have lheir pleasant villas, their fast horses, and their countless friends, and in possession of all that makes life acceptable, can afford to smile at the brilliant but somewhat visionary reward of political honesty—a posthumous fame.

Irish Prosperity.

An exchange says, we have 7,000 more paupers receiving relief this year than we had last year. This relief costs us 10d per head more than it did last year. Such is the information conveyed in the annual report issued by the Local Government Board for the year ending February 15 last. Of course, all this will be explained by those who trade on the prosperity cry; it will be, no doubt, relied upon as a proof of progress, and it will be declared that though our paupers are increasing, the system for their relief is perfect, so perfect that it must ultimately tend to diminish their numbers. This point of view is sustainable by that portion of the report which chronicles the pauper mortality. It appears that the deaths in workhouses were 1,000 in excess, as compared with the previous year. We cannot see how the "system" can diminish the number of paupers, unless, indeed, as the report seems to indicate, it kills them off in large numbers gradually but steadily. It is a curious fact that the largest number of deaths are set down to easily curable and preventable diseases, such as fever, diarrhœa, dropsy, &c. A page of the report chronicles the distress prevailing in the islands of Shark and Boffin, and also the fact that the Local Government Board, to alleviate the distress, did—nothing. The fishing season was approaching; a Glasgow company was expected to advance money for the purchase of kelp—but didn't—and, accordingly, the Commissioners, satisfied that the people could endure starvation until the advent of the fish, calmly awaited, without taking any action, the coming of better times for the starving islanders.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Singular to relate, but fact, nevertheless, there is not now living a single descendent in the male line of Chaucer, Shakspeare, Spensor, Milton, Cowley, Butler, Dryden Pope, Cowper, Goldsmith, Scott, Byron, Moore, Philip Sydney, or Sir Walter Ralrigh; not one of Drake, Cromwell, Hampden, Monk, Marlborough, Peterborough, or Nelson; not one of Strafford, Ormond, or Clarendon; not one of Addison, Swift, or Johnson; not one of Walpole, Bolingbroke, Catham, Pitt. Fox, Burke, Grattan, or Canning; not one of Bacon, Locke, Newton, or Davy; not one of Hume, Gibbon, or Macaulay; not one of Hogarth, or Sir Joshua Reynolds; not one of David Garrick, John Kemble, or Edmund Kean.

A MINISTER had a negro in his family. One Sunday, when he was preaching, he happened to look in the pew where the negro was, and could hardly contain himself as he saw the negro, who could not read or write a word, scribbling away most industriously, After meeting, he said to the negro: "Tom, what were you doing in the church?" "Taking notes, massa; all de gemmen takes notes." "Bring your notes here and let me see them." Tom brought his notes, which looked more like Chinese than English. "Why Tom, this is all nonsense." "I thought so, massa, all the time you was preaching it."

THE Coffeyville, Kan., Courier thus advertises "The Courier is printed nearer to the scene of tne late Bender horror than any other newspaper. Those wishing to subscribe for a good, live newspaper should make a note of the fact."

THE retiring editor of a Kansas paper "valedicts" himself as follows: "If I have said anything through these columns that I am sorry for I am glad of it. To my friends, I thank you for your liberality, and to my enemies, you can go to the devil."

A GEORGIA paper recently contained the following item in its society gossip: "The amiable and delicious Miss Pilkington, whose charms of mind and person have turned the heads of our gallants, now does her hair in braids, and patronizes this paper exclusively in her personal make-up."

AN advertsier of a new liniment mildly calls our attention to the fact that his notice should read, "There is no pain this liniment will not relieve," an idea saggested to him by the last issue of the Danbury News, in which a compositor had taken the precaution to substitute the word "revive" for "relieve."

A TROY man advertises "the largest assortment of boys' pistols in the market." Inasmuch as the merchant has an undertaker's shop on one side of him, and a surgeon's office on the other, suspicion has been aroused.

A Model Police Inspector.

It is within the recollection of our readers that one of the preservers of British law and order, Sub-Inspector Montgomery, was tried at two assizes for the crime of murdering the cashier Mr. Glass, and robbing the Northern Bank at Newtownstewart. He was tried for the third time at the last assizes in Omagh, and on July the 28th, was found guilty. He put in the very modest plea that, like Mrs. Fair and Captain Jack, he didn't know what he was doing when he battered in the old man's skull. The following report of proceedings will be perused with interest:—

The jury retired at a quarter past five. Fifteen minutes afterwards they returned into court. As soon as their names were called over they were asked by Captain Buchanan if they had agreed to a verdict?

Foreman—We have.

Captain Buchanan—Gentleman. you say that Thomas Hartley Montgomery is guilty of the murder of William Glass.

To the prisoner.—Have you anything to say why sentence of death and execution should not be passed upon you according to law?

The prisoner then said:—

In the first place, I must thank your lordship for the impartial consideration shown towards me, not only during this trial but during preceding one. I wish to say, my lord, that, at the time of the perpetration of the murder, and for twelve months before that, I was in a state of complete insanity. In the month of June 1870 I was invited to Milecross, the residence of Mr. Bradshaw; at that time I was in the enjoyment of excellent health, and was there deliberately drugged and poisoned, with the object of rendering me weak-minded. When I went to the doctor, he told me I had only a few days to live, and that I could scarcely recover, and in that state I was directed and compelled, and, being weak-minded, I consented to marry. at the time in a delicate state of health and then became worse and worse. In the month of November, I embarked in these foolish and ridiculous speculations, when I lost enormous sums of money —larger sums than have transpired in evidence, for some persons who gave me money have not come forward to say anything about it. I then became vicious, and this monomania of attacking banks took possession of me. I stated repeatedly to several members of the Constabulary not only how this sort of thing could be perpetrated but that I myself would do it. I told my own orderly, upon one occasion that I went to Holywood, that I intended going to the bank there and killing the cashier, and would carry the money into the Cave Hill, and build a house of sods for myself to live in. The man said I was mad, and followed me after that day. When I was in Newtownstewart, I was in a state of complete derangement. Head-constable Hobson means far more than he has said when he says I was frequently complaining of my head. I never would have injured any one if I had not been mad. Sergeant Armstrong called it a terrible murder, and there can be no doubt it was a murder that no educated man or man of feeling could have performed. Why a savage of New Zealand could have done nothing worse, but I was a demented being at that time, and bereft of reason; and there is a very great difference between my case and that of a man who knowingly and willingly, commits an act of the kind. In my case, I was entirely in a helpless state, weak-minded and silly. I don't think an act of mine in that state should be visited upon me as the act of a wise man—a man in possession of his senses. That is all I have to say my lord.

Judge Barry then proceeded to pass sentence upon the prisoner, ordering him to be hanged on the 26th day of August, in the County Jail. The demeanor of the prisoner throughout was calm and collected, and did not give any color to the plea of insanity which he put in.

It may par parenthese be remarked that the Fair Day of Donnybrook, (Aug. 26) is not inappropriate for the Irish play of hangnig a policemen.

The captain of the Alabama, lately arrived from Liverpool, reports the sinking of the bark Abeona, of Liverpool, on the night of the 4th inst. She had seen the Alabama's light for an hour or more, and was watching it—imagining that she was a tug —when she was struck on the starboard side by the Alabama, and sank in four minutes. The Captain, Mr. James Montgomery, of Ireland, Mr. Caldwell, one of the owners of the bark, five Englishmen and one Swede went down with the bark. Three who were saved came on to New York on the Alabama.

The deepest humiliation of all is that the articles of silver plate manufactured to commemorate England's defeat in the Alabama affair must be paid for by the worsted party. Three thousand seven hundred and eleven pounds constitute this small item of expenditure. Of this also Ireland must pay its part. Pitt and the other promoters of the "Union" knew what they were about.

The University of California

We propose giving to the Regents and their scholarly alumni a little illumination on algebra, and, lest we should get the credit of knowing anything about it ourselves, we herewith make acknowledgement of the fact that we found the solution of the difficult problem hereinafter set forth, in the Dublin Shamrock, embalmed in a letter to a bogus Home-Rule member of Parliament from one of his oily and not too national constituents. Mick McQuaid, the ex-evangelizer and ex-quack-doctor, was in conference as a newly-elected Member with his brother fraud, Terry Gerraghty, when the postman handed in the following letter:—

"'To Mick M'Quaid, Esq., M. P.:

"'HONOURABLE SIR—My wife's brother, Pat Darcy, voted for you at Blarney, and got a cracked skull by a Tory for doin' it, and his hat was smashed by the same blow. Therefore, I think I have some claim on you for compinsation, as Pat wishes his sufferin's to go to the good of his nevview, my gosoon, Jimmy Buckley. Jimmy is turnin' fifteen, and is a fine scholart for his age, can read words of three sillabels, and is fine at sums, and has gone up to dismal fractures in vosther, knows some algibra, and in histhory knows Pathorini and the seven champions of Agibt. He rites a fine hand, as you may see by the speciment inclosed. He did the following sum without slate or cutther, but by fair workin' in his head:—If a hundred o' stone-turf cost eight-pence, how much will half a hundhred o' lumpers cost? Oulder scholarts than Jimmy said it couldn't be done, but Jimmy only laughed at their ignorance, and said it could by algibra, and this is how he did it: A hundhred o' stone-turf, by the sum given, costs eightpence, and there's no value put down for the lumpers, and, therefore, we'll put down their value at single X, and then let us come to find the value of singls X. Now, the way to find the value of single X is to see how the lumpers was sellin' in Kinturk the last market day. Molly Dignan sold her lumpers at sixpence a stone; Thady Doherty at sixpence; Nancy Duffy at sixpence. Jack O'Gormand sowld some at sevenpence, and was askin' more, but he's a d—d mizert. for he berrid his mother in a piece of an ould tarpolain to save a windin'-sheet, so we'll put him aside and take the value of single X from the three first honest crathurs. Now, sixpence a stone is what lumpers was sellin' at, and, therefore, sixpence is the value of single X, by which its seen they are six times the value of the stone of turf, bekase it was sellin' at eightpence a hundred, which is a pinny a stone or fourpence the half hundhred. And, as fourpence the half hundred was the value of the turf, any bosthune can see at wanst that six times four is twinty-four, which is two shillin's, or, by algibra, four single X's or two XX. So if a hundhred of stone-turf cost eightpence, half a hundred of lumpers must cost two shillin's, which is the answer. Jimmy says, bekase I don't know the plan of doin' it at all, that scholarts would head the sum this way:—As the stone-turf is to the lumpers, so the lumpers is to the anser. Jimmy could do twiced as hard sums as this with a slate and cutther, but I won't boddher you with any more of his learnin', but come to the point that I have in writin' to you. I want to get Jimmy on the tillegraph-wires——' "

"Don't go any further with that, Terry; but, if you answer it, you may say that I'll get Jimmy on the gallows. where he can have the use iv a hemp-wire, if that would shuit his father and Pat Darcy."

LATE TELEGRAMS BOILED DOWN.

Keller who murdered his wife, Mrs. Boyd and two children on the 17th inst., near Twin Springs, Kansas, was lynched by the excited populace on Thursday last. Keller, it will be remembered, after killing his wife and Mrs. Boyd with whom she was stopping, burned the house to conceal the bloody deed. All of his executioners, undisguised, composed nearly all the principal inhabitants of the township.
